EMERGENCY LIGHTING

Emergency lighting forms an essential part of the fire escape plan and fire safety management of a building. With an average of 160 prosecutions annually for non-compliant emergency lighting, with fines reaching up to £400,000 supported by the increasing complexity of building design and usage, the correct design and maintenance of emergency lighting systems is essential.

Designed to illuminate in the event of a power failure, emergency lighting guides the primary escape routes from a building to a point of safety, while identifying risks such as changes of level along with locations of essential fire safety signage and fire fighting equipment.

Our businesses are qualified to design, install and maintain a range of emergency lighting including:

- Bulkhead lighting for common escape routes
- Flood lighting for larger areas
- Downlighters for office aesthetics or specific work locations
- Illuminated signage

TECHNOLOGY ENABLED CARE SYSTEMS (TECS)

The significant growth in the social alarms sector which includes warden call, telecare, dispersed alarms and nurse call systems, can be directly attributed to the rapid growth in the UK's ageing population.

Our communication systems can be designed specifically for grouped housing schemes utilising the latest generation of cordless digital systems featuring offsite control and optional pendant, inactivity, smoke and intruder alarm triggers. This system can be easily combined with a communal door entry and access control system.

Our systems are designed to meet the needs of a generation who want to remain as independent as possible but, at the same time, achieve peace of mind through the knowledge that safeguards are in place to provide the level of care and support they may need.

Our systems include:

- Warden Call
- Dispersed Alarms
- Telecare Peripherals
- Nurse Call
